NEW ONLINE ORDERING

WINE LISTS

| KEEP IT SIMPLE |

A poor wine list can confuse and complicate a dining experience as whereby a great list can win over new customers and put patrons at ease.

So how do you get your wine list to work for you on many levels and be something that you can proudly present?

Consider a simple less is more approach with layout and descriptions that make ordering a smooth process for the less wine-savvy clientele. Navigating a sea of grapes, names and years can lead to certain frustration and seriously reduce the evenings fun factor.

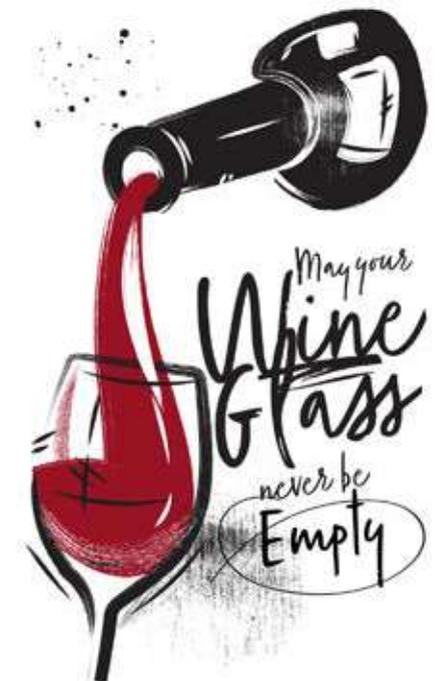

Aim to speak directly to a customer with terminology that they understand such as dry, sweet, bitter, strong along with suggestions of which food make a suitable pairing. Including this helps point towards a wine that customers might not otherwise try and instead make a poor decision solely based on price alone.

Subtle and functional go a long way with the layout. Ideally aim to use two fonts, one that can be used for bolder headings and another that can be easily read for longer descriptions. If you have a brand font that's used throughout the establishment then even better, this consistency helps develop the sense of trust for those visiting.

With your logo and any images that you may want to include always look to have high resolution versions available. Menus can often be let down by images which have been taken from websites which then become pixelated on the final printed version.

Small categories of wines work well to break up the menu. The addition of box surrounds or icons can help draw the attention if you have a special priced wine of locally sourced suggestion.

A simple wine list can be diverse, exciting and most of all add adventure to the meal. We go out to try new things and have a welcome experience, making your wine list user friendly will mean customers return and spread a good review.

NEW WORLD WINES

Wines Of Distinction

WORDS BY ALAN LAVERS

Geographically helped by the Andes Mountain range which produces wonderful clean fresh water from the melting snow which runs down into the river systems. This is then used for irrigation in this dry, continental climate where rainfall can be scarce.

Growers in the past used a unique system of dams and irrigation channels that almost lets them turn on a tap when water is required, whereas the more modern wineries tend to use a drip irrigation system.

Argentina can claim wine culture back to the early Spanish settlers in the 16th century although towards the end of the 18th century when immigrants mainly from Italy, Spain, and France arrived is when it was planted more heavily with vines.

This is when the Malbec variety arrived together with many others; however it is the Malbec originally from France that has become the signature grape of the Argentinian wine industry.

When the immigrants from Europe ventured to Argentina in those early days one of the reasons was because of an outbreak of Phylloxera in Europe. The French Vineyards were nearly wiped out between 1860 and 1900 due to this destructive microscopic root louse that was attacking the roots of the vines and thus bleeding them to death.

The immigrants travelled to Argentina to see if they could change their fortunes, fortunately when the vines were planted in Argentina's sandy soils Phylloxera could not survive as they did in the heavier soils of Europe and so vine growth was vigorous.

Nowadays around the world vines tend to be grown on American rootstock which is resistant to Phylloxera, but it is still mandatory to report any signs of the "little beast" if found in a vineyard.

In those early days table wine consumption was a significant part of Argentinian culture although the wine itself was not always great, production was high. Having said that most of the wines were very average, there was the odd exception, but by the 1990s new internal investment and Flying Wine Makers from Australia arrived. The Flying Wine Makers used their experience in many countries to clean up wine making and get the best from the juice to make more desirable wines with better flavour and finesse. Over the following years this brought Argentina onto the world map of wine producing countries with a serious hat on.

Argentina enjoys the highest commercial vineyards in the world at 1700 metres above sea level at Cafayate in the north down to a more modest (but still high) North Mendoza 650 metres, and outlying areas back up to over 1000 metres, this cooler climate helps with the aromatics of the wine. Amongst all the wine regions in Argentina Mendoza is by far the biggest; and probably accounts for more than two-thirds of the total wine production and so is the country's most important region while Malbec is its most important grape variety. It is easy to see why this country's wines are growing in popularity, with stylish aromatic whites and the world's finest Malbec. Here at Tolchards our selection of Malbec's range from house wines to wines of distinction.

When Pascual Toso set out from Piamonte in Italy in the mid 1880s I bet he never thought he would be setting up one of Argentina's oldest and most prestigious wineries. Their top end Malbec's are certainly one for the connoisseur while their mid-range just shows more affordable excellence.

The Pascual Toso Estate Cabernet Sauvignon is well above the normal Cabernet quality. Finca del Alta not only produce a pure Malbec but also a lovely blend of Malbec and Merlot the latter grape really softening the texture.

Take a peep at the Alto de Mayo Malbec not only a modern label, but modern wine making produces this full bodied wine with hints of vanilla, blackberry, and plums, together with a soft silky finish and a price that won't break the bank. As the reds are by far the most popular we mustn't forget the Finca del Alta Chardonnay Chenin Blanc a light delicate aromatic wine with hints of tropical fruit.

Just another day in an Argentinian vineyard.

Argentina

Argentina has in a rich vein of wine making heritage, one which is prolific and now well respected from initial humble beginnings. There was certainly once a period of isolation but wines produced today are of greater interest and display superb quality.

Vines were planted as early as the 15th century by Spanish Conquistadors, but it was really the arrival of the Italian, Spanish and French settlers who introduced their own indigenous varieties and wine making style that things start to thrive.

The two great wine growing regions are the provinces of Mendoza and San Juan in the North West of the country, where vast vineyards grow at an altitude of some 2,500 ft in the direct presence of the Andes foothills.

In recent years, restless producers have pushed the wine frontier westward, high, and South and East, seeking the cold of southern latitudes or the influence of the ocean.

From the high vineyards in the North, through the aridity of Cuyo and the plains of Patagonia, to the new projects on the edge of the Atlantic, Argentine wines offer an endless range of flavours that reflect the identity of each region.

Driven principally by the mighty, meat-friendly Malbec. Bonarda is the second most widely planted red and makes a much lighter, more frivolous red.

Don't forget Argentina's signature white, Torrontes – at high altitude it can make an aromatic, sensuous white that's brilliant with spicy dishes.

Zapa Malbec

Zapa is made from the juice of Malbec grapes alone, grown in 70 year old vineyards in Mendoza, Central West Argentina. Very deep ruby-red tones, brilliant and clean.

On the nose, complex aromas of red fruits are combined with a touch of wood which enhances the presence of chocolate and vanilla. The texture is supple, with ripe tannins and a well balanced finish.

OVERALL

Plum, Damson and Black Cherry fruit on the nose leading to a smooth, medium weight palate with soft tannins, ripe dark berry fruit and warm spice.

WHY I LIKE THIS WINE

Malbec is Argentina's most celebrated grape and is one of only six grapes permitted in red Bordeaux, it was first introduced to Argentina by French immigrants in the mid-19th Century.

This wine is produced from grapes grown in the high altitude vineyards of the Uco Valley which imparts character and freshness in the wine. Matching perfectly with chargrilled meat (especially beef) it is a must have wine offering fantastic value for money.

Finca Quara, Estate Malbec

ARGENTINA, Cafayate Valley, Salta

Quara are produced by Felix Lavaque who boast a 140 year history and 5 generations of wine-making expertise. They were the first to plant noble vines in Cafayate, Salta where high levels of UV light, cool nights and warm days produce perfect growing conditions for expressive fruit development.

Red Cherries, Blackcurrants and herbal aromas, soft tannins and subtle acidity support the well-rounded flavours of Plums, Mulberries and Cherries. The soft tannins, fresh acidity and herb notes will work well with thyme and rosemary crusted roast lamb.

Verum Patagonia Malbec

ARGENTINA, Patagonia

This cool climate Malbec comes from low-yielding vineyards.

A small part of the blend is aged in French oak and then blended with the rest providing Intense ruby red with violet tones. Aromas of red fruit like Blackberry and Plum, Spices, Caramel, Vanilla, and Chocolate. Silky tannins. Both balanced and elegant, full-bodied with a long fruity successful finish.

CLEAR SIGNAGE

The UK has experienced a public health emergency as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. As such, it is critical that businesses take a range of measures to keep staff, customers and the public as safe as possible.

A large attractive sign can become a reference point for others by way of direction that gets you repeatedly mentioned, builds awareness of your business and more importantly your brand. A poor outdoor sign which is difficult to see, read and confusing will have the opposite effect on passing trade, instantly putting you on the back foot.

We are entering a new normal where we have to abide to a number of guidelines to ensure social distancing and other regulations. The need for clear and visible signage has never been more needed. We have all had to adjust our way of working, from managing the entry and exits of customers, providing clear guidance on social distancing and hygiene to people on arrival, reconfiguring indoor and outdoor seating and tables to maintain social distancing and further more how to go about ordering means customers can understandably feel a little overwhelmed. So the right signage positioned in the right places can help customers feel safe and relaxed knowing what is expected of them.

In house boards should be easy to read and at eye level or above, sifting through a passing crowd to catch a glimpse of the specials boards will only lead to frustration. Draw attention to items with larger or different colour fonts or highlight certain wines by making them 'Manager's Choice' Or 'Customer's Favourite'.

As many wines are often chosen by label design the same can work in your location. A board designed with your most profitable wine selection can work on many levels. Not only can this sway decisions towards the most profitable, but also speed up service for bar staff by having decisions already made.

If you have a good location and footfall is established there is a clear advantage to investing in well thought out signage. Helping customers navigate with clear prompts, making choices clear and obvious not only puts you in a positive light but certainly boosts profits.

With bold and large outdoor signage customer's instantly learn who you are and what can be expected. Clear signage is your voice that can grab a customer's attention and encourage them to enter and seek what you present. You may only have a few seconds to accomplish this so make sure your signs follow a few design rules.

Attention grabbing signage should be in keeping with your brand colours, be bold and in a prominent place. Most outdoor signs work best when they are eye catching, brief and to the point. Look to be recognisable not read.
